

Trauma Centre Trauma Sensitive Yoga (TCTSY) Group Therapy Therapist Information

TCTSY Information

- Weekly 1-hour classes.
- Regular 5-week blocks throughout the year.
- TCTSY is a clinical intervention & somatic model for trauma treatment (Emerson, 2015, p. 1). Essentially, it is a body-based adjunct therapy for trauma.
- Theoretical underpinnings of TCTSY include trauma theory, neuroscience and attachment theory. The relationships one has with self and others are seen as integral to the therapy (Emerson, 2015, p 31).
- TCTSY is the first yoga-centred, empirically validated, clinical intervention for complex trauma or chronic, treatment-resistant post-traumatic stress disorder (Trauma Center Trauma Sensitive Yoga, 2022). While it is different to what might be considered 'regular' yoga the core value of yoga being "...practices undertaken through a desire to live life more fully..." (Emerson, 2015, p. 2) remains.
- TCTSY has five foundation principles which are fundamental to the therapy,
 - Invitational Language: Trauma survivors most likely have experienced a power over dynamic. Invitational language encourages self-empowerment (Turner, 2020, p. 73).
 - Choice Making: Participants are offered choices about how they practice yoga. This supports a sense of agency (Turner, 2020, p. 6).
 - Interoception: Is the capacity to feel sensation within one's body which can be disrupted with trauma. The practice cultivates interoceptive awareness. (Emerson, 2015, p. 22)
 - Shared Authentic Experience: Mutual participation between the facilitator and participant highlights attunement and relationship (Turner, 2020, p. 6).
 - Non-Coercion: "No intervention that takes power away from the survivor can possibly foster recovery no matter how much it appears to be in the person's immediate best interest" (Herman, 2022, p. 191).
- For 'accepted' sensitive claims & 'accepted' mental injury physical claims clients
- Suitable for women clients of all fitness levels, age, & health status. No experience needed.
- Clients are welcome to bring their own yoga mats, or these can be supplied. Supportive props of chairs and bolsters are provided.
